June 11, 1991

Mr. Charles Clark
30 Davaar Road
Saltcoats, Ayrshire
Scotland, U.K.

Dear Charles:

It has been 15 years since we last corresponded, and the world has greatly changed since then.

To expect that you are at this same address may be an idle hope -- since that date we have moved our home address three times -- but hope does spring eternal.

Recently we published a biographical study of Gerald Gardner and I would like to send you a copy. It was inspired by some of the materials you sent me years ago, although -- as you always requested -- no reference to you by name is made. Other sources include both published materials and correspondence the author (Aidan Kelly) initiated with Doreen Valiente and others, and the Gardner materials that ended up in the Ripley warehouse in Canada.

The book is a study both of Gardner and of the religion of Wicca as it is today. I think it is a good book, but would love to have your opinion.

Looking back through our correspondence I find references to other people I corresponded with so many years ago -- Margaret Bruce and Veronica Pope. I wonder if they are still in this world. Margaret, you may remember, helped me a great deal with my researches into the Witches Cradle.

I finally made it over to Britain March 1990, spending a week with my family driving around the west country, and then a week in London for the Book Fair. We have been exhibiting at the London Book Fair for about ten years now, but this was the first time I came over. Enjoyed meeting many people I had corresponded with for years -- Alan Richardson, Basil Wilby (Gareth Knight), Pete Carroll -- and visiting the British Museum. Hope to make the trip again in a year or two, and perhaps be able to drive up in your area.

Hope to hear from you, and to find you well.

Blessed Be,

Carl Llewellyn Weschcke
President